INSTRUCTIONS

The daycare fee is determined by the parents' ability to pay. It is collected as monthly payment according to the reimbursement category decided by the municipality from up to eleven calendar months per year. The reimbursement category is determined by the amount of the child's and his/her parents' or guardians' incomes.

When the daycare fee and the reimbursement category it's based on are determined, continuing and other taxable incomes are taken into account. These do not include child benefit, child care allowance, housing allowance, disability allowance, medical expenses executed by the workers compensation and insurance or causality requirement, conscript's allowance, basic study grant or housing supplement or other allowances related to studying, nor the reimbursements of family care expenses.

The information about wages and salaries may be provided with wage slip or some other document which clearly states the amount of the salary and holiday pay that fall under the withholding tax.

If necessary, the amount of other taxable incomes will be disclosed via appropriate documents. Information about entrepreneurial income is found in the report concerning the details of the withholding tax, provided for the current year by the tax administration.

Income's taxability has been decreed in the income tax. Specific information on taxability of entrepreneurial income can be found in the Farm Income Tax Act for agricultural businesses, and the act of business taxation for entrepreneurs.
